By ROBERT MISKIMON

The Rev. H. H. Lusk of Bethel Baptist Church in Seaside never had time to wait for "the man" to do anything for him. So he set about doing everything himself, and in the process convinced "the man" that many of his most cherished myths were false.

What kind of myths?

The myth that all welfare people are lazy and irresponsible.

The myth that poverty had become so ingrained in some families through several generations that it could never be changed.

The myth that activists in the black community could accomplish their goals only through exercise of black power rhetoric.

If he's proven himself something of an iconoclast, Lusk knows it's all for a good reason. All of these things came about through his herculean efforts to establish and perpetuate Operation Shoe Strings, now the largest single day care center on the Monterey Peninsula and the second largest employer in Seaside.

The evolution of the name for Operation Shoe Strings tells much about the evolution of the project and the fierce determination of Lusk and others to make it succeed.

Shortly after the assassination of Martin Luther King in 1968, Lusk was one of a number of community leaders invited to attend a seminar in Chicago sponsored by the Ford Foundation and the United Methodist Church, with the theme of social consciousness.

"They were talking about a long, hot summer in the communities across the nation and they were trying to get us to help do something constructive about it," Lusk said.

The seminar lasted for a full week at a time, over a three-month period. During that time, Lusk commuted by air between Seaside and Chicago, in order to continue normal church activities at Bethel. Among the speakers at the conference were Saul Alinsky, Ralph Abernathy, members of the Black Panther Party, and people from the Ku Klux Klan.

The first week of the seminar involved direct contact with the unfortunates along Skid Row. Each participant was given $7 on which to survive for a week as an exercise in understanding the problems of the truly destitute.

"It was the greatest experience I had in my life," Lusk recalls. "I learned to appreciate the people on Skid Row. I survived by going to the Greyhound bus station and carrying people's baggage for them. I really learned to appreciate what the hippies were going through."

"I came up to this one hippie couple and told them I was hungry, and they gave me their last dollar to eat with. I really learned how to share from that experience."

The purpose of that exercise was to get the participants to recall or learn what effects grinding poverty has on the human

Dissention Mounts In AMBAG Over Regional Planning Role

Does the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments represent a needless and costly duplication of existing planning functions?

That's the concern of several cities on the Monterey Peninsula that have expressed their disenchantment with the regional agency in recent weeks in a variety of fashions.

Sand City, the smallest incorporated city in Monterey County and possibly in the nation (Pop. 250) last week approved a resolution withdrawing from AMBAG. The following day, Pacific Grove did likewise. And Carmel is toying with a resolution expressing its profound dissatisfaction with AMBAG's function as a planning agency.

What most of the cities are objecting to is the expansion of the role of AMBAG from a clearing house for federal grant funds, which was its original function, to that of a regional planning agency.

The concern shared by most of the cities objecting to this new role is that planning functions are being needlessly and wastefully duplicated; at the same time, the dissenters see a threat to local autonomy in the controls from state and federal governments that go with state and federal revenues to AMBAG.

The different cities that have made noises about AMBAG each have their own points of conflict. But the two largest cities of the Monterey Peninsula, Seaside and Monterey, are unlikely to consider withdrawal simply because of the large sums of federal funds coming to those cities through AMBAG's clearing house function.

These funds include the $26 million in federal funds for urban renewal that has come to Seaside through the years, and similarly large amounts to Monterey for the same kinds of programs. But the smaller cities that like to think of themselves as more independent and freer from outside influence have made their discontent with AMBAG known.

"Our city has not asked for any government loans or grants," said Mayor Phil Calabrese. Sand City last week when that city voted to remove itself from AMBAG. "Ours was the first paid up member of AMBAG. I've made a lot of noise and I don't think it's been appreciated."

AMBAG Executive Director William Hood said the withdrawal of two of the 17 agencies comprising the organization does not in itself threaten to terminate it.

"But it certainly can't be as effective as if you have full cooperation," he said. "I regret that they've pulled out."

Hood said there was some disagreement among members over the participation as a member by AMBAG in the National Association of Regional Councils, an organization composed of other associations such as AMBAG. Those who objected, voted against membership.

Specifically, in the case of Pacific Grove, the city has not been oriented toward seeking state and federal assistance, and "AMBAG relies very heavily on outside financial assistance, and has become involved with state and federal agencies."

Therefore, there may have arisen a philosophical conflict between the Pacific Grove city council's prevailing manner of conducting business and that imposed by necessity, upon AMBAG, Hood speculated.

"Some local people look upon it as an unnecessary search for funds to keep AMBAG going," Hood said.

Hood said AMBAG is about to receive $750,000 in federal funds for the Section 208 Waste Water Plan which has been a source of discontent to some members who see that plan as needless duplication of a comprehensive basin plan completed in 1973.

Another sore point with some AMBAG members has been the Metropolitan Planning Organization, for which AMBAG has been designated the coordinating agency. The MPO is another regional approach to transportation planning.

"The straw that might have broken Pacific Grove back was when we were told by the Department of Housing and Urban Development that to maintain our funds, we would have to get involved in regional planning ourselves," Hood said.

Once AMBAG voted to accept the designation on terms stipulated by HUD last April, "the reaction was set in" among those cities who disagree with the extension of federal controls into the planning process.

Seaside Mayor B.J. Dolan also admitted to some philosophical reservations about the role AMBAG has assumed. But he hastened to add, there is no chance that

Mural Painting Begins At DMV Office

Painting was begun last week on a mural to decorate the inside of the Department of Motor Vehicles building in Seaside.

The work is part of a project begun at four field offices in California to beautify the facilities and to depict various themes relating to transportation.

In addition to Seaside, similar projects are being undertaken in Fresno, Visalia, Montebello and at other offices.

The artist painting the Seaside office is Sjeef Smeets of San Rafael, who is one of several artists contracted by the state to execute the project.

His theme is "Man - Slave of the Wheel."

In a news release from Sacramento, the DMV said the point of the project is "To make the offices an integral part of the communities they serve."

DMV Director Herman Sillas, who instigated the projects, said "in this manner, we hope to make our department a 'Good Neighbor' in the community and to reflect the cultural heritage of all the peoples that we serve."

Seaside Manager Art Henoch said solicitations for local artists to submit compositions for the mural were made, and only one local artist submitted to a design, which was not chosen by officials in Sacramento.

The Department is spending $400 on the local project. In addition to the mural, local paintings and photos are being sought to be hung inside the

The DMV further stated in its news release:

"The murals will have transportation as the central theme and will concentrate on its history or its present and future course. Where appropriate, the murals will reflect the ethnic heritage of the communities."

Summer School Classes Start

register at Del Monte School during this week.

Elementary swim programs at Monterey and Seaside High Schools are still open for registrations this week. Students must be 42 inches tall at chin height to participate in the beginning, intermediate, and advanced classes. Registrations will be taken at the pool locations.

Kindergarten classes are another new addition to summer school this year. Students who will be five years old prior to July 25 may attend the six week summer session. Parents may register their child at the school of attendance.

Prospective students may call the school they wish to attend for information regarding individual course offerings and sign-up procedures.

A Remembrance Of Things Past

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Drive Launched To Recall Three KCouncilmen

A move to recall three city councilmen from office is being launched, it has been learned. Mayor Jack Oldemeyer, Dr. John Craigie, and Joe Cota would be removed from the council if the recall attempt succeeds.

Plans for the recall are the result of Councilman George D. Pollock's ouster as chairman of the city's health and safety Committee and "dissatisfaction with recent actions of the three councilmen, concerned," informed sources told the News-Sentinel.

They said that plans for the recall move are still in the formative stage and that no concrete steps will be taken until after July 4.

Herman S. Nielsen, one of the purported leaders of the recall group, expressed confidence that "There are sufficient votes available to recall any of the council members except one." Nielsen declined to identify the sole exception.

He confirmed, however, that a meeting of certain businessmen, will be held next week to consider the recall. Nielsen discloses that a subsequent meeting will be open to the public.

Asked why he is taking part in the controversy, Nielsen charged that the councilmen have constituted themselves into a separate "assembly."

"When these three men appear at council meetings time after time with decisions already made before hand," Nielsen alleged, "They certainly didn't make up their minds individually."

Nielsen claimed a recall is necessary because "most of the council members don't have the ability to hold their positions and because they don't seem to be able to learn."

Nielsen scored Mayor Oldemeyer's administration as a "semi-dictatorship," saying it brooks no disagreement.

Principals Comment On Recall

Oldemeyer: "I know of no man who has caused as much disturbance in our city government as Councilman Pollock. I find it difficult to believe that so many people can be wrong and one man right."

"I also cannot believe that so many people are guilty of illiteracy. Recall elections can be a two-way street: I believe it would have a better chance of success if reversed; that is, if the attempt were made to recall Pollock."

"I have tried consistently to bring personal differences to an end; I now concede that my efforts have been fruitless."

Craigie: "I would be happy to submit myself to the wishes of the people. Since, however, the entire council must be recalled in April anyway, I consider it an unnecessary expense to have a recall election at this time."

"I also question Mr. Nielsen's competence to take part in this matter. Since he does not attend council meetings, how can he have an accurate impression of what transpires at the meetings?"

Cota: "In my opinion, the recall attempt has no chance of success. There have been no specific charges against the members of the council. I can see no basis for a recall."

Recall Would Be Unwise (Editorial)

Plans to recall certain members of the city council, if allowed to materialize, will have a serious and detrimental impact on Seaside.

More important than the individuals involved are the principles and precedents at stake. While the California Elections Code does not require that specific charge be brought against a public official in order to recall him, it is generally agreed that recall is more than an expression of disagreement or non-confidence.

It is, in effect, an expression of censure or condemnation. Is such a step in order here? We think not.

One may disagree, or perhaps vehemently so, with the views and votes of councilmen. But we can detect no turpitude or malfeasance in office which would justify the steps now being contemplated.

Only deeper division and growing enmity can result if the recall attempt is pressed. The end result would be inevitable. Those affected, and their followers, would but live for the day when they could pounce on a subsequent council. And so the political vendettas would multiply -- with confusion and turmoil the only victors.

Metz Offers $9,000 For Laguna Project

In a letter turned over to the civic committee of the Seaside Chamber of Commerce, A.G. Metz has offered to contribute $9,000 to the proposed Laguna Grande Development.

In his letter, Metz said in part: "I have, for a long time, felt that the lake, or at least a portion of it, would make a beautiful aquatic park for the city and while it does not have the stamp of a grandiose plan... it is at least something which is possible of accomplishment without delay."

"I have figured out a plan by which the city (or any acceptable public agency) might be able to take definite action without delay, and which would not preclude the possibility of later carrying out the larger plan."

"In rough figures, the Monterey Investment Co. owns about 18 acres of the lake, which is all under water, including over 1,700 feet along the southerly border of the lake adjoining the city of Monterey. The water along this line is very shallow and a 100-foot driveway of shore Boulevard could be filled and improved at moderate cost."

New Law Firm To Open In Seaside

A new law firm, Farr, Twobig, and Weingarten, will be opened in Seaside this week. Offices will be located at 740 - A Fremont Ave. All three members are familiar to Seaside.

Fred Farr, State Senator from the District, has practiced in Seaside since 1948. Tom Twobig has also been an attorney here for many years. Saul Weingarten is Seaside City Attorney.

Whither The War On Poverty?

EDITORIAL

Last week's election of a representative the action. There was a high degree of involvement from the low-income community of the Fourth Supervisorial District to the Monterey County involvement then, but probably not the kind of Community Services Agency raised some farmers of the War on Poverty. perplexing questions.

As reported elsewhere in this issue, there was one vote cast by the one member of the community who came to the meeting for the one candidate, incumbent Henry Burney of Seaside. Thus, the federally-mandated requirement for elections of community representatives was satisfied, and the program continues.

But there was a point in that meeting when serious consideration was being given by community services staff members to ways in which participation from the low-income residents from Seaside could be stimulated to participate. In that discussion, there was no small amount of bureaucratic colonialism showing; every bureaucrat worth his salt knows that his own self-interest is served if he has a clientele needing his bureaucratic services.

Certainly, there is nothing wrong, and probably everything right, with having low-income persons participate in decisions on the kinds of programs that affect them. But when participation is practically non-existent, either because the low-income persons participate in decisions on the kinds of programs that affect them. But when participation is practically non-existent, either because the low-income people are totally satisfied with the services or totally apathetic, what is the rationale for beating the bushes to bring the warm bodies in contact with the bureaucratic machinery?

Is it possible (Heaven forbid!) that the concept of the community action agency, as structured in the War on Poverty launched by Lyndon Johnson in the 1960s, has outlived its usefulness and that all the bureaucratic machinery created by it represents nothing more than another layer of red tape?

Valuable services are, indeed, being performed by the present Community Services Agency including senior citizens' services, Meals on Wheels, Transportation, and a host of others. And the community action agency is being run like the smooth, efficient, responsible bureaucratic machine that appeals to middle-class taxpayers and to the politicians who elect them.

Several years ago, the community action program more closely resembled a floating crap game, where stakes were high and many, many members of the low-income community anted up in hopes that could have a piece of

On the one hand, the community action agency had tremendous involvement of the poor, whose needs were very real, but who were at the mercy of the more astute hustlers and con artists who came out of the woodwork to get their hands on some of the money being channeled into the program.

Now, with fiscal and administrative responsibility built into the program through the county board of supervisors, community involvement, at least in Seaside, it at an all-time low ebb. Both ways, the real needs of the poor seem somehow to have been lost in the shuffle.

There may be another way to go in this business of warring poverty.

The concept of the community action agency originally was that of a training ground, to help the low-income and disadvantaged get on their feet and make their own way in the world. Fine. But has that objective been met?

To a certain extent, yes. There have been people from Seaside and elsewhere moved from the welfare rolls into paying jobs and productive roles in society. But what about the vast numbers of poor, who are too disinterested to attend meetings where representatives to the community services agency are held?

An alternative approach worthy of consideration is that of the skills bank -- an exchange of skills, knowledge and information from within the community which could be of immense help in getting the poor out of their situation. The exchange of skills could be structured around whatever interests or needs are identified by the low-income people in the various target areas. This would provide a hand up for those needing one, and an opportunity for valuable public service for those sharing their skills.

"Skills" could include anything from learning how to balance one's checkbook, to learning to play the fiddle, to learning how to deal with bureaucracy in working out individual problems.

In line with Supervisor Roger Poyner's suggestion that the community services program be administered at the local, rather than county level, the creation of skill banks within cities such as Seaside to assist the poor makes better sense than any other method attempted to date. (R.M.)

personality and mind. For some, it was a matter of jogging old, and repressed, memories; for others, it was a stunning learning experience.

Not all the participants could handle the initial exercise, and some returned home. Those who remained, like Lusk, seemed to emerge with renewed sensitivity and sometimes surprising energy.

"When I came back to the Peninsula, I was really charged up," Lusk said. "In 1968, we didn't have recreational programs for kids in the summertime. So I called the churches, civic clubs, and other groups and I worked up a recreational and educational program for Seaside.

"We opened up the schools in Seaside that summer to a total of 1,500 kids. We fed them breakfast and lunch, and took them on field trips all over the Peninsula, took them camping at Big Sur, and to basketball and baseball games."

The funds for that summer crash program came from donations amounting to about $20,000 from all over the Monterey Peninsula. Three hundred persons volunteered to help staff the program, and more than 150 youth became involved through the community action agency. Surplus food was obtained from the government, and young people were hired as teachers' aides.

I was, in every respect, a shoe string operation.

But, toward the end of that summer, a meeting with parents of the advisory board brought to light the great demand which has been met by the program, and the desire of parents to see the program continued through the year.

"We had kids from two and 14 years old," Lusk recalled. "A lot of parents had had the chance to go back to school at MP, or to get a job and get off welfare, and they wanted the program continued."

Lusk was given both the responsibility and direction to try to establish such a program. After numerous trips to Washington, D.C., San Francisco, Sacramento, and elsewhere in search of funds, Lusk finally found out that federal funds for such a program could be obtained through Title IV of the Social Security and Welfare Act. The funds would provide 75 per cent matching funds to 25 per cent local funds to assist low income persons with child care.

By February of 1969, the program was underway at Bethel Baptist Church, once the cooperation of Monterey County welfare officials was enlisted in making the project viable. The first group of children numbered 50, between the ages of three and 12 years.

"We proved to the county welfare office that there were third and fourth generation families on welfare in Seaside," Lusk said. "So, we took the children while the parents went to school or into a job training program."

Between 1969 and the present, a total of 625 families have participated in Operation Shoe Strings, including a total of 1,565 children. And 99 per cent of the families who take part each year are new families, which means that 99 per cent get off welfare and into paying jobs, or move from the area into a more prosperous employment market after learning job skills.

The program has been so successful that Lusk has helped 12 other organizations establish similar programs throughout the state.

Participating parents pay on a sliding scale according to their income; those with very low incomes pay nothing. About 25 per cent of the families pay something for the service, and the remaining 75 per cent pay nothing because their incomes are too low.

The current level of funding from state and federal sources is $213,000. Just two months ago, a new building was added to Project Shoe Strings to advance its child care mission. The Peter Ferrante Building was so named for the individual who gave tremendous assistance in making contributions from the annual Bing Crosby Pro-Am Golf Tournament.

There are now 165 children between the ages of three and 13 involved in the program, but Lusk hopes to be able to double its capacity to meet a still-unsatisfied need. The children come from all parts of the Monterey Peninsula and from all sorts of racial and ethnic backgrounds.

"The best part is that most of our kids from Project Shoe Strings can go into regular public schools and compete with the middle class children," Lusk said proudly. "We've set out to help these kids whose mothers don't have the time to read to them and take them on field trips."

"Some of these kids are excellent. Some of the kids who were 12 at the time we started have finished high school and are entering college. And these are kids from broken homes, welfare families. The important thing is, we're not just black—we're a community program."

The children of legal school age are picked up by Operation Shoe Strings buses and taken first to the project for breakfast, and then are taken to their schools. After school, they receive tutoring in those subjects in which they are weak. If a child is a good student, then he tutors others or helps with the little children.

The pre-school children get breakfast, lunch and snacks. Their daytime routine is filled with language arts, mathematics, music, dancing, recreational programs, field trips and other learning experiences. Ninety-five per cent of the staff comes from Seaside.

A JUNGLE GYM provides children with motor development at Operation Shoe Strings' day care center.

Membership Accepted For Boy's Club

The Monterey Peninsula branch of the Boy's Club of America is accepting membership applications and will begin its summer program this week. This announcement was made jointly by local United Fund officials and Ed Johnson, executive director.

The summer program will include both indoor activities and summer day camping. The indoor portion is open to all club members, seven through 18 years old. The day camping is open to all peninsula boys and girls aged seven through 13 years.

Johnson outlined a very extensive list of planned summer activities and added that the membership fee is $1, charged to off set insurance costs.

He expressed his organization's appreciation to the Monterey Peninsula and summer day camping. United Fund for their continual support and said that "dollars from the Fund have made a dream come true, allowing us to establish this exciting activities program."

The local UF annually contributes to the club's budget, with this year's donation totaling more than 65 per cent of the charity's operating capital.

Also announced was the dedication of the club's new activity center, planned for July 21. The "new" building is actually the former Church of the Nazarene, located at 1332 La Salle Ave. in Seaside, which has been completely rehabilitated by the club's board of directors. It will house various recreational and arts and crafts equipment, and also a library.

Johnson added that the club has an ever-present need for current library books, recreational equipment, and adult volunteers who can offer supervisory help.

Library Staffing Begins

Applications are now being accepted for staffing the newly-constructed Seaside Library.

The following positions are open:

Librarian III, Librarian I, Librarian Assistant II and Librarian Assistant I. The filing date has been listed for August and any citizens who qualify should apply at the Monterey County Personnel Office in Monterey or Salinas. For further information contact Councilman Stephen E. Ross at 899-3774.

Concerning the County Health and Welfare staffing for the new building at Broadway and Noche Buena, Ross said he had investigated the staffing pattern of the facility and learned that "the final staffing is incomplete at this time, but just as soon as some concrete information is made available, my office will disseminate the information in this area."

7th Division Holds Reunion Here

Veterans of the heavy fighting on Okinawa and Leyte in World War II swapped stories with slightly younger vets reminiscing of the fierce winter when they reached the Yalu during the Korean War as the 7th Infantry Association held its semi-annual reunion on the Monterey Peninsula.

Activities for the group, reported to be more than 500 strong, took place at the Monterey Holiday Inn and at Fort Ord.

The compact program included the old "Hourglass Division" soldiers observing a performance of the Pageant of Flags and a retreat ceremony Friday, June 20, at Ft. Ord's Headquarters Parade Field. This was followed by a get-together barbeque at the Holiday Inn.

Saturday the veterans and their families visited Fort Ord where they watched as two Infantry Battalions with proud heritages are activated to rejoin the 7th Infantry Division stationed at Fort Ord.

Immediately following the activation ceremonies an exhibit called the Parade of History was presented to the visitors. This parade is made up of 17 floats depicting historical moments in the 200 years of Army history.

The veterans and their families then lunched at the dining halls of the unit they served with or with the nearest related unit to their own. In the afternoon they met at Holiday Inn.

The association made a surprise donation to the 7th Infantry Division Museum, which was opened at Fort Ord in 1945.

Sunday, June 22 there was a short memorial ceremony in honor of the members of the 7th Division who gave their lives for their country.

Do your weekly grocery shopping on a weekday night when the stores are less crowded and the job will be over much faster. Spend the time you save sewing some new draperies for your home and think of how valuable you are as a seamstress and interior decorator combined!

Summer Art Workshop Class Offered

Beginners, intermediate and advanced students, interested in outdoor sketching, drawing and painting in various media are invited to join the Seaside Summer Art Workshops.

Elements of art, drawing techniques, watercolor and oil painting techniques, color and design, outdoor sketching, will be included in these workshops, taught by Charles Y. Lee, M.A. in art and education, artist-educator for some 28 years. Lee started the Pacific Grove Adult Art Class in 1957 and the Fremont Adult Art Class in 1972. He has been a member of the Seaside Art Commission since 1966.

Lee said the Fremont Class is open for those more advanced students who wish to go outdoor sketching and painting, meeting initially in Room 2, Fremont Junior High on Kimball Avenue in Seaside. The Pacific Grove Class will meet in Room I-1, High School, from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. June 24.

Both the night sessions are for anyone interested in drawing and painting, although the day workshop is planned for more advanced students who already have a basic knowledge of art.

Lee's Summer Art Workshops are sponsored by the Monterey Adult School and by the Pacific Grove Adult School. Please call Lee at 394-2965, or Mr. Anderson at 649-7336 or Mr. Heyl at 373-4951 for registration and further information.

University For Man Openings

The University for Man, Monterey's "free" university with offices located on the Monterey Peninsula College campus is looking for teachers or group leaders to head a wide variety of courses in the Fall 1975 session which begins Sept. 15.

Sherry Pastor, UFM coordinator, said the atmosphere of UFM groups is relaxed and casual. "There is usually more of a spirit of sharing than teachers lecturing and students listening. Everyone comes to a class because he wants to, not for grades, credits or requirements," she said.

Classes have been organized as outgrowths of leaders' professions; a doctor spoke on preventive medicine, a tax consultant on tax planning, a bike shop owner on how to repair your bike; two lawyers run classes on how to get your own divorce and a garage owner teaches a class on consumer mechanics.

Ms. Pastor said a great diversity of interests are represented, from wine tasting to massage, from hiking and exploring to the stock market.

"We always have requests for crafts classes and subjects like chess and bridge, but not enough 'teachers' to lead these courses," Ms. Pastor said.

If you have an idea for a class, or if you think you might need a little help getting started, contact Ms. Pastor at 649-1150, ext. 283.

Carmel To Present Dance Shows

Sunset Center will again sponsor a Carmel Festival of Dance Series for 1975-76. This will be the third annual dance festival series.

Four dance performances by internationally prominent companies will be presented. On Monday, October 13, the lavishly costumed Lhama Folk Theatre of Tibet, the only surviving masters of the songs and dances of Tibet, will open the series. Following, on Wednesday Nov. 12, subscribers will enjoy a return engagement of the incredibly popular Jose Molina Bailes Espanoles Company which was the hit of the first Carmel Dance Festival.

Then, on Monday, Feb. 9, 1976, the dynamic and sensuous Polish Mime Ballet Theatre will perform in a program of humor, energy, and eloquent athleticism. Closing the series on Friday, April 2, 1976, will be the Royal Tahitian Dance Company making its first American tour with the colorful and enchanting dances of the warm Pacific islands. This is undoubtedly one of the most fabulous series ever to be scheduled on the Peninsula.

Brochures describing the four-show international program are to be mailed soon to those whose names, as a result of previous subscription, are on the festival mailing list. The brochure will include a ticket order form to permit preferential ticket purchases. Later when the preferred sale time expires, remaining tickets will be placed on sale on a first-come, first-served basis.

Tickets for individual shows will be available later in the season, but for the present only season tickets for the complete series of four performances will go on sale. Season tickets offer a savings of about 25 per cent over individual ticket prices. For more information, call 624-3996.

To prevent children from using and perhaps breaking glassware, or dirtying a sinkful of dishes before dinner, make a rule to use only paper cups. Another rule: clean up afterward — easy enough with tossaway paperware! A Dixie cup wall dispenser hung at just the right height for kids will make getting milk or juice easy.

City Employees Receive 7.5 Per Cent Salary Increase

Employees of the city of Seaside will get an across-the-board salary increase of 7.5 per cent effective July 12.

The city council voted them that much in additional monies at its regular meeting last Thursday, despite a complaint from the employee organization that other cities on the Monterey Peninsula were giving their employees higher increases.

The total cost of the salary package is $160,000 and it will not increase property taxes, although reserves will have to be used in order to cover the raises.

"We request that you vote no on this and we recommend that you authorize the city manager to continue to negotiate on salary and fringe benefits," said Ken Tunis, president of the Seaside Employees' Association.

Some of the items requested in the fringe package were non-cost items such as giving employees their birthdays off, and he asked that the council reconsider before approving any salary schedule.

Tunis also said Seaside's amount of salary increase was less than Pacific Grove's, which just gave its employees an 8.5 per cent increase, and Monterey County, which afforded its employees an 8 per cent adjustment. Monterey employees are likely to receive an increase of as much as 10 per cent, he added.

"It was determined by the council that not more than 7.5 per cent increase would be granted, not by management," said Mayor B.J. Dolan. "We decided on this in order to be fair to all employees."

Both Councilmen Oscar Lawson and Steve Ross expressed the belief that the 7.5 per cent increase was all the city could afford, even though the council might want to grant higher increases.

The council also took two separate actions concerning water in Seaside.

In one action, the council voted unanimously to increase by 17 to 18 per cent the water rates for some 750 customers in upper Seaside who receive their water from municipal wells.

The rate increase was effected in order to bring the city's rates in line with those charged elsewhere by California-American Water Co. The rate increases take effect July 1.

In another matter, the council approved a resolution calling upon the Public Utilities Commission not to allow a requested rate increase to Cal-Am until the water company "agrees to immediately commence to construct the Canada De La Segunda Pipeline facility and the Begonia Iron Removal Plant."

The pipeline would divert water from the Carmel River Aquifer to Cal-Am customers on the far side of the Monterey Peninsula, including Seaside. But Cal-Am has told the P.U.C. that it can't construct the pipeline because of inadequate revenues.

At the same time, there is a very real threat of salt water intrusion into the water table in the Seaside area if the water supply is overdrawn. Two weeks ago, the P.U.C. handed down an order effectively halting all new construction on the Monterey Peninsula after June 30 because of the water situation.

City Engineer John Crivello said some 5,100 acre-feet of water are being drawn annually from the Seaside Aquifer, which is about twice the estimated safe yield. He informed the council that, should salt water intrude into the Aquifer because of reduced fresh water pressure, the process would be irreversible.

Councilman Joe Cota asked if Seaside could halt its water being pumped into Monterey, and wondered whether the city has any sort of water conservation program, or a water monitoring program for the water used by the city.

City Atty. Carey Royster said that only action the city could take was to urge the P.U.C. to order Cal-Am to complete the Canada De La Segunda pipeline.

Mayor B.J. Dolan said Fort Ord has taken the lead in the use of reclaimed water, since the Army now replaced some 2.6 million gallons of water daily into the Aquifer through treated waste water which is used for irrigation and to replenish the underground water table.

The city council also routinely approved two ordinances establishing underground utility districts in the Laguna Grande Redevelopment Project. Both ordinances had been approved on first reading.

Three appointments were made to city commissions. Mrs. Linda Mitchell, Marcial Sabado, and The Rev. Welton McGee were approved as new members of the Human Relations Commission. Emil Schmidt was appointed to the Seaside Redevelopment Agency.

The terms for the Human Relations Commission is three years; the term of office for the Redevelopment Agency is four years.

The Engineering Consultant Firm of TJKM of Walnut Creek was hired at the fee of $7,000 to conduct an engineering design and traffic analysis study of Fremont Boulevard at the south end of town.

The contract includes preliminary design work and traffic study development of alternative plans, public hearings, drafting of final plans, and final approval and construction scheduled for August of 1976.

Mrs. Ida Fogle of 1624 Mingo. asked the city council to do something about speeding and noisy cars in her neighborhood.

"I appeal for your consideration of speed bumps across Mingo Avenue near Highland Park," she said. "There is a serious problem with young men in the area racing their cars. This has been called to the attention of the Seaside Police Department, but they say nothing can be done unless the offenders are caught in the act by the police."

Mrs. Fogle said more families would use the park if they felt the streets around it were safer. "This is really putting in danger the lives of those under 12 years. The children are going to be the citizens of the future, and the loss of one child in that area is too great a price to pay."

Mayor B.J. Dolan informed Mrs. Fogle that the city has had a number of complaints about the same type of problem, dating to 1972, and that some of the infractions were found to be noisy mufflers, rather than speed demons.

A stop sign was installed in and surveillance was beefed up following a rash of complaints several years ago, Dolan said, and the council met with some of the youngsters in the area to ask their cooperation in solving the problem.

"When I say speeding, I mean doing in excess of 65 to 70 miles per hour," Mrs. Fogle disagreed. "The police come and patrol the area, and they stop; then they start again."

The complaint was referred to the city staff for investigation and remedial action.

Fishing Limit Endorsed Locally

Carmel River Steelhead Association President Rich Hughett announced the organization has overwhelmingly endorsed the establishment of a 200-mile fishing limit off the shores of the United States.

"We strongly believe that this jurisdictional boundary must be established," Hughett said, "to protect our salt water fishery from further exploitation by other nations."

The recent seizure of a foreign fishing vessel off the Santa Cruz coast proves what American fishermen have said for years, that these boats are working within the present 12-mile limit, and are a threat to our own commercial fishing industry. Also, these other nations have shown little regard for any conservation methods, leading to a very obvious depletion of this one-time major natural resource.

"Therefore," Hughett

concluded, "we want to see the 200-mile fishery limit established immediately and kept in effect until, if ever, the United Nations comes to agreement over international boundaries. Our association has sent letters to our federal and state representatives, including Secretary of State Kissinger, requesting immediate action and we urge everyone else to do the same while we still can save our ocean fishery."

Community Services Agency Struggles Through Local Election

If involvement in the Services Agency is any indication, it would appear that Monterey County Community most low-income people in The Seaside area are either very content or very apathetic.

When a public, "Town Hall" meeting was held last Monday at The Seaside Adult Center at 292 Hilby to elect a representative from the low-income community from the Fourth Supervisorial District, only one candidate and one eligible voter appeared.

Henry Burney of Seaside, who has been involved with the anti-poverty program for five years, was re-elected by the overwhelming majority of one vote, cast by Mrs. Rena Belton of 1700 Sonoma.

With Supervisor Roger Poyner and several staff members from the Community Services Agency present, a conversation ensued about the reasons for the low turnout and methods for remedying the situation.

Everyone agreed it was a far cry from the days of the old Monterey County Anti-poverty Coordinating Council, which was taken under the wing of the county supervisors in February of 1972.

That action was taken after the anti-poverty council had gone through many painful months of turmoil and dissention, and after its director, Charles Claborn, was suspended because of a charge of check forgery against him. Claborn was subsequently convicted and sentenced on the charge.

Prior to 1972, the Antipoverty program was administered by a board of directors directly elected by the low-income residents of all the cities of Monterey County, and control of all funds was invested in that board.

After the supervisors took control and established the same basic program as a branch of county government under the Title of community services, all fiscal and administrative matters were relegated to the executive director, who is hired and fired by supervisors.

The present board of directors, for which elections were held last week in Seaside, acts only in an advisory capacity to the executive director and to the supervisors. And all budget decisions are made by the supervisors, who are now considering a requested allocation of some $1 million for the 1975-76 fiscal year.

The current operating budget for this year is $387,000, of which some $70,000 goes into various programs for senior citizens, $35,000 for the outreach program, $40,000 for transportation, and about $57,000 for manpower programs.

The services provided through the agency in Seaside include the operation of the Adult Center, which is maintained as a senior citizen center, as well as the outreach office at 1580 Del Monte, where community service aides handle referrals to various agencies, transportation needs, and help with preparation of income tax forms, and provide other services.

The manpower program in Seaside provides counseling services, job referrals, and job placement, as well as backup services to see that employment is not only secured but maintained. There are a total of 47 paid employees of the community services program throughout the county, including Director Richard Bennett, whose salary is $16,000.

There was considerable discussion among those present at last week's "election" as to the causes for the low participation by those for whom the program is designed.

Supervisor Poyner suggested that one possible explanation might be that the low-income community does not perceive the election of representatives to the board of directors as anything other than a rubber stamp operation, without much meaning in the final program, since the entire operation is directed by the supervisors.

Mrs. Belton noted that the low-income people in Seaside do not want to be identified as such, and there is a stigma attached to participating on any organization where the label "poor" is applied.

Vicki Shepard, a social worker with the Monterey County Department of Social Services, suggested that those for whom the program was designed may be apathetic about the program because they do not have high expectations for meaningful return, or because they may not understand what services are available to them in the community.

Henry Burney, who will now serve again on the Board of Directors, said he thought the low participation was because there is no financial return to those who take part, and those who would become involved out of personal commitment are few and far between.

Burney said it is his opinion that not enough money is being spent at all levels of government on social programs, but that the services being offered by Community Services Agency are needed and effective.

"Perhaps the Board of Supervisors should relinquish their authority as the community action agency," Poyner suggested.

He proposed returning the program to the individual communities and allowing them to tailor the kinds of programs that best met local needs, thus giving participating board members some actual power to direct the program.

Director Richard Bennett said he feels the program has been successful in meeting the needs of the poor, and noted that on the Monterey Peninsula about 1,000 bags of vegetables are given away to low-income families each month, and about 1,000 rides per month are provided free to low-income people.

A number of persons also have been helped, through community services, off the welfare rolls and into paying jobs, Bennett said.

Before Burney was finally nominated and elected to fill the position as representative from the supervisorial district, there was discussion among community services staffers about means of increasing community involvement in order to hold a successful election.

Among the suggestions discussed were a door-to-door campaign to elicit participation from the low-income residents.

Art Field Trips Planned Locally

C.Y. Lee of the Seaside Art Commission is planning some art field trips during the summer months for the benefit of students and adults interested in visiting museums, art galleries and special shows at the San Francisco Bay Area.

The first trip is scheduled for Saturday June 28, from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m., to visit the exhibits at Oakland Museum, University of California Art Museum, College of Arts and Crafts, Palace Legion of Honor Museum, and to dine at San Francisco Chinatown before returning to Seaside.

The second trip is primarily for the senior citizens of the Peninsula. It is scheduled for Saturday, July 11, 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. to visit the famous Chinese Art Treasure Exhibit at deYoung Museum in San Francisco, San Francisco Museum of Art, art galleries in Chinatown, and to have a family-style dinner in Chinatown.

This tour is limited as there are already some 27 people signed up. There probably will be spaces for about eight more. The capacity of each chartered bus is about 38. Mr. and Mrs. Lee will be guides, and Chinese hostesses from San Francisco will be assisting at the 10-course Chinese dinner.

Anyone interested in going please phone 394-2965 and make reservation now. The deadline for the June trip is June 20th and the deadline for the July trip is July 1. Cost of these trips, covering round-trip transportation, meal, tax, and tips will be given to those who call.

Cities Question AMBAG's Role

Seaside would withdraw because of its heavy funding dependent upon the regional clearing house procedure.

The Seaside city council last week voted to approve its membership dues in AMBAG for the fiscal year 1975-76 in the amount of $5,411 with a request that some adjustment be made in the fee due to the withdrawal of Pacific Grove and Sand City.

"We've got to go along with AMBAG to get our clearing house functions," Dolan said. "But I agree with Pacific Grove that AMBAG is costly and duplicates some services."

"We already have the local air pollution control district, and AMBAG was going to go into a $1 million regional air quality control program. The problem is that Seaside either has to have AMBAG or a Council of Government (COG) to act as a clearing house for federal funds."

Pacific Grove City Mgr. Gary Bales said the city council held study sessions on AMBAG and decided not to pay its annual membership dues of $3,520 before formally withdrawing.

"We're concerned about the 701 planning program with AMBAG," Bales explained. "This requires AMBAG to prepare a comprehensive land use plan for the area. The city council feels this has been done, and would be a needless expenditure."

"The estimated cost of the 208 waste water management plan is $1.4 million, and the council feels that this, too, has already been accomplished by other studies. They're very concerned about regional planning functions."

Carmel is to decide July 8 on a draft resolution expressing its displeasure with the direction of AMBAG is taking. City Mgr. Hugh Bayless said the intent of the resolution is to express the city council's belief that AMBAG should restrict its activities to those defined in its original purpose: "A regional clearing house to process federal grants to the various cities."

"We strongly object to a regional planning agency getting into planning matters," Bayless said. "The solid waste disposal plan was what triggered it for us. They wanted to take over the Marina Dump, and the feeling of the board members was that this is our dump, supported by local taxpayers, and we'll run it."

"AMBAG should be a clearing house, but not a regional planning agency. This is just another example of bureaucracy being created and then starting to perpetuate itself."

Army Celebrates Its 200th Birthday With Party At Fort Ord

Nearly 30,000 Californians wished the Army a happy 200th birthday at Fort Ord Saturday, June 14, and were treated to a display of Army life.

The Bicentennial-Army Birthday celebration spanned two days with a stars and stripes sendoff on Friday afternoon with "Old Glory" holding center stage during the colorful Parade of Flags pageant on the Main Post Parade Field.

Activities were centered at Fritzche Army Air Field on Saturday, where the crowd witnessed three parades, rescue operations, aircraft flyovers and displays of all aspects of the Army.

The crowd began arriving at 8:30 a.m. and reached the peak at noon, overflowing the bleachers and settling on the areas surrounding the airstrip to watch a series of presentations highlighted by a float-punctuated parade of history.

The 17-float narrated pageant traced the history of the Army from the first battle at Lexington-Concord to the present, with each of the truck-drawn displays depicting a significant era in the 200 year history of the Army. A narration, sound effects, live and taped music captured the 200 years of proud heritage in spectacular fashion.

Prior to the Parade of History, the crowd saw the Army in a life-saving role working in conjunction with the Monterey County Sheriff's Department. An Army helicopter was called in to rapidly evacuate a simulated accident victim from a remote site. Law enforcement officials and the Army combined their talents to lift the victim to a medical facility.

More than 1,200 troops, from all Fort Ord units, paraded for the overflow crowd in a stirring military review featuring a Colonial Color Guard and a 21 gun artillery salute. Congressman Burt Talcott and Maj. Gen. M.C. Ross of Fort Ord reviewed the massed troops before they marched past the huge crowd.

A panel of judges selected the 2nd Battalion, 32nd Infantry as the top marching unit. The Battalion from the new-forming 7th Infantry Bayonet Division was the only unit to parade with their bayonets fixed to the rifles.

All day long, families who traveled from all parts of Central California visited the numerous displays, ate hot dogs and cotton candy, and enjoyed the midway atmosphere.

The youngsters got the biggest kick out of the "Kiddie Jump Tower." Mothers favored kilt-clad Scottish Pipers while dads flocked around the belly dancing demonstrations at the Family Growth Center booth.

The only disappointment in the entire action-packed schedule came from the weather. Low ceiling and unpredictable winds cancelled the scheduled sky-diving demonstration by the Fort Ord

Sports Parachute Club.

Four of the 17 floats in the Parade of History were selected for awards by the local chapter of the Association of the United States Army. The Gilded Soldiers, a 707th Maintenance Battalion float depicting period soldiers out of the 200 years of Army History was selected as the Overall Winner.

The most Historically Accurate Award went to the 3rd Brigade entry entitled Valley Forge. The Originality Award was won by the World War II float designed by the 7th Infantry Division Support Command. The Best Construction Award went to the 4th Brigade's Go West Entry.

Fort Ord's military policeman provided the most accurate count of the huge crowd. The MP's parked more than 10,000 cars and estimated the day long crowd at more than 30,000 people.

The Parade of Flags Pageant was repeated on the Ft. Ord Main Post Parade Field, Friday, June 13 at 4:30 p.m. and the Parade of History was restaged on the 3rd Brigade Field, Saturday June 19.

SOLDIERS salute as the colors pass at the Fort Ord observation of the U.S. Army's 200th birthday.

WINNER of the most original float in the Parade of History at the Ord observation of the Army's 200th birthday was this float depicting home life and front line duty in World War II. This float was entered by Headquarters and Headquarters Command, 7th Infantry DISCOM.

Summer Musical Program

A school devoted entirely to music will be a new feature of the Monterey Peninsula summer program to be held through July 25. Music students in grades five to 12 will attend morning classes at Del Monte School to combine their talents in instrumental and vocal music.

The school, under direction of Alvin Mendonsa, is open to students who have had previous musical instruction, and is not for beginners. Classes will be offered in orchestra; intermediate and advanced sections of brass, strings and woodwinds; intermediate and advanced band, piano, guitar, and chorus.

Beginning instrumental music will not be offered except for those students who are proficient in one instrument and wish to learn another. Instruments should be provided if possible by the students; regular school instruments also will be issued.

Transportation will be provided for most students; parents may have to assume some trips. Students should check bus schedules to be published in the paper.

Other new activities and classes include animal behavior, chemistry laboratory, creative math, high school English skills, American literature, introduction to foreign language, conversational French, history of the Monterey Peninsula, dance and tumbling, basketball workshop, and boys' and girls' sports.

Elementary activities will include reading, mathematics, art, music, physical education, science, health, language and culture of foreign countries. Special classes may be developed in individual schools centering around teacher, student, and parent interest. Students and parents should contact individual schools regarding each summer program.

Elementary summer school centers will be at Monte Vista, Bay View, La Mesa, Del Rey Woods, Noche Buen, Manzanita, Stilwell, Patton, Crumpton, and Marina Vista. Secondary schools will be at Monterey and Seaside High Schools for grades seven to 12.

Students should register in classes according to the grade level they will attend in September 1975. Registration forms are available through individual schools or through the Summer School Office at 700 Pacific St., telephone, 649-7256.

Applications should be returned to the office no later than May 9.

CHILDREN SHOW GREAT INGENUITY

How ingenious can children be? Some entertaining answers to this question are being created by children all over America, who are sharing creative games, puzzles and projects with their family and friends. They're also finding out how to deal with such things as anxiety, expectation, fear and trust. At the same time they are discovering how a television program is put together. And, they are learning how to enjoy reading a newspaper.

The paper they're reading is "Around the Neighborhood," a new, nonprofit newsletter from "Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood," public television's critically acclaimed television program for children aged 3 to 8. In simple words and colorful pictures, it tells them about their favorite characters and guests who appear on the program. It provides highlights of upcoming shows, expands upon the education themes developed in the program, gives them a behind-the-scenes view of the studio, and presents lots of ideas for creating their own toys and games. An entertaining record or poster comes with every issue.

In each edition, sections are devoted to the parent, pointing up the object of each article, and its effect on the child in the hope of providing a way to better communication between parents and their children.

"Around the Neighborhood" has carried articles on the "Mister Rogers' children's opera, "Potato Bugs and Cows," and "Daniel, the Tame Tiger," a lovable puppet from "The Neighborhood of Make Believe." Opera singer Francois Clemmons, a frequent guest on the show, and astronaut Al Worden have also been featured.

Underarm stains on a nylon slip caused by a dress that faded can be removed with no sweat. Pour some rubbing alcohol on a washcloth and rub the spot.

Accidentally spilling bleach on a black dress holds bleak prospects for the wearer. She can, however, try using black shoe polish on the spots. It usually works beautifully and will not come out when the dress is cleaned.

BBQ SAFETY HINTS
Danger lurks in even the most peaceful surroundings and many backyard cookouts have ended in tragedy because the chef ignored common-sense safety rules.

Place your barbecue grill out in the open, away from anything flammable. Make certain it has sound footing and is away from primary activity areas but is set up to allow room to work. Safe grill equipment is important so be sure your forks, tongs and spatulas have long handles. Use heavy glove-style potholders and dress in a non-flammable apron. Avoid loose flopping clothing that might catch fire.
